WHICH JOB DO YOU THINK IS MORE INTERESTING

I would never be a layout designer because it is a hard job. You need to deal with the client's opinions and you also have to understand the code behind the application, the work of the developer. When you work as a backend, typing source code for others, you have to make functional websites with the simplest code you can write.

I would say young people are oriented to 1 main activity, Social media and online applications with video content like Instagram and Facebook. Because it's funny and it's a hobby to know others creations and opinions. I know teenagers that can browse this kind of applications for about 40 minutes straight!
